

English, 2005 EC, entrance exam

Grade 12 · English · 2005 E.C.

Time allowed: 120 minutes

Questions: 88

Total marks: 88

Name _____ Grade _____ ID No. _____ Date _____

1. She in do the what you evenings know does. (1)
 - A. What she does do you know in the evenings?
 - B. In the evenings do you know what she does?
 - C. Do you in the evenings know what she does?
 - D. Do you know what she does in the evenings?
2. Get to at tea six up we o'clock drink. (1)
 - A. To drink at six o'clock tea we get up.
 - B. We get up at six o'clock to drink tea.
 - C. We drink up tea to get at six o'clock.
 - D. We get up to drink tea at sis o'clock.
3. World I the sail to around want. (1)
 - A. _To sail around the world I want.
 - B. I want around the world to sail.
 - C. I want to sail around the world.
 - D. Around the world I want to sail.
4. A. It has only one room. b. Konjit's house is a hut. c. The room is divided into tree sections. d. The three section are bedroom, kitchen and pantry. e. A bed and a bigt wooden box are in bedroom section. (1)
 - A. e b a d c
 - B. c a d b e
 - C. e a c d e
 - D. d e c b a
5. A. The first thing I do is work out. b. My morning ritual is the same every day. c. After that I put on my make up and leave home. d. When I have school, I have to do a lot of things. e. When I finish working out, I take a shower, fix my hair and get dressed. (1)
 - A. a d c e b
 - B. d e b c a
 - C. e a b d c
 - D. b d a e c
6. a. One of my favourite things to do is wash my car. b. People say they can tell about a person by their shoes. c. Here is the thoughtful process I follow to wash my car. d. A clean car says I?m proud and I feel good about my self. e. I say that you can tell about a person by how clean his car is. (1)
 - A. b e d a c
 - B. c a b d e
 - C. e b c d a
 - D. a d b e c
7. A. But unfortunately, it got so furious. b. Unlike we thought, it was a wild cat. c. I was playing hide and seek with friends. d. We were happy thinking we could take it home. e. Then my cousin and I discovered an abandoned cat. (1)
 - A. e a b d c
 - B. e d a b c
 - C. c e a b d
 - D. c e d a b

8. 1. When I was in junior high school, my parents gave me a typewriter. My friends Amy Neff and Carol Stein often walked with me to my house after school. We closed my bedroom and spent the afternoon giggling-or rolling on the carpet, howling with lunatic laughter as we tapped out silly limericks and satirical stories on my typewriter. Once we even wrote a play. 2. Our after-school typing was not homework. We rambled wherever our teenage imaginations took us; we explored words widely for the pure fun of it, with no exam or report cards in mind. We practiced literacy risk taking and problem solving, honed our language skills and learning perseverance, all with no fear of failure-because we were playing. Few children today have time for this kind of after-school play. There is too much homework. Parents' concerns about overload have become a familiar story as schools all over the country pile on homework in a mis-aimed response to criticism that they were teaching too little. Some elementary teachers routinely assign time-consuming work in each of three or four academic subjects every night. 3. Amy Neff, one of the friends who helped me enjoy my typewriter in junior high, learned at school meeting in May that in fifth grade her 10 year-old daughter would have an hour and a half to two hours of homework seven days a week, plus special projects. "The idea is that, under avalanche of work, children should learn to organize their time efficiently," she wrote me in an e-mail message. "Nobody has mentioned creativity; ideas and content of what is learned. Just doing LOTS,FAST!" 4. The parents and grandparents of today's children had time "playing around" with stamp collections or model airplanes, writing a fairy-tale, selling lemonade or not realize is that these kinds of interests and hobbies are just as important as academic learning. 5. Many successful adults have a childhood history of freewheel play. Louis Ignarro, a Nobel Prize winning pharmacologist, had six successively complex chemistry sets and played with model rockets. When Letty Cottin Pogrebin, president of the Authors Guild, an association of published writers, was 9, she spent afternoons writing and drawing for a monthly magazine she printed on a primitive press called hectograph. She charged friends and family 3 cents a copy and then mailed each copy with a 3 cent stamp. She recalls now, "I never understood why the magazine did not make a profit." But that is just the point: when kids play, they are free to experiment and learn from experiences, without worrying about how well they are performing. 6. Though homework has a clear benefit in high school, there is no research showing that any amount of it advances the education of elementary school kids. They may be stuffing a great deal of information in to their heads, but after an hour or two, children lose any eagerness or joy they have in learning. That is important because research has shown that when children enjoy it, their learning is deeper, richer, and longer-lasting. 7. Parents do have some recourse. They can meet with principals and teachers, organize other parents, and protest. Parents in several communities have prevailed upon school districts to enact homework limits. For their children, at least, there may still be time to indulge in the ancient and powerful medium for learning known as play.

In paragraph 2, the author maintains that children learn best when:

- | | |
|--|--|
| A. ___ They are given a lot of homework. | B. They have time for play after school. |
| C. School do not give them homework. | D. They do homework with a typewriter. |

9. 1. When I was in junior high school, my parents gave me a typewriter. My friends Amy Neff and Carol Stein often walked with me to my house after school. We closed my bedroom and spent the afternoon giggling-or rolling on the carpet, howling with lunatic laughter as we tapped out silly limericks and satirical stories on my typewriter. Once we even wrote a play. 2. Our after-school typing was not homework. We rambled wherever our teenage imaginations took us; we explored words widely for the pure fun of it, with no exam or report cards in mind. We practiced literacy risk taking and problem solving, honed our language skills and learning perseverance, all with no fear of failure-because we were playing. Few children today have time for this kind of after-school play. There is too much homework. Parents' concerns about overload have become a familiar story as schools all over the country pile on homework in a mis-aimed response to criticism that they were teaching too little. Some elementary teachers routinely assign time-consuming work in each of three or four academic subjects every night. 3. Amy Neff, one of the friends who helped me enjoy my typewriter in junior high, learned at school meeting in May that in fifth grade her 10 year-old daughter would have an hour and a half to two hours of homework seven days a week, plus special projects. "The idea is that, under avalanche of work, children should learn to organize their time efficiently," she wrote me in an e-mail message. "Nobody has mentioned creativity; ideas and content of what is learned. Just doing LOTS,FAST!" 4. The parents and grandparents of today's children had time "playing around" with stamp collections or model airplanes, writing a fairy-tale, selling lemonade or not realize is that these kinds of interests and hobbies are just as important as academic learning. 5. Many successful adults have a childhood history of freewheel play. Louis Ignarro, a Nobel Prize winning pharmacologist, had six successively complex chemistry sets and played with model rockets. When Letty Cottin Pogrebin, president of the Authors Guild, an association of published writers, was 9, she spent afternoon writing and drawing for a monthly magazine she printed on a primitive press called hectograph. She charged friends and family 3 cents a copy and then mailed each copy with a 3 cent stamp. She recalls now, "I never understood why the magazine did not make a profit." But that is just the point: when kids play, they are free to experiment and learn from experiences, without worrying about how well they are performing. 6. Though homework has a clear benefit in high school, there is no research showing that any amount of it advances the education of elementary school kids. They may be stuffing a great deal of information in to their heads, but after an hour or two, children lose any eagerness or joy they have in learning. That is important because research has shown that when children enjoy it, their learning is deeper, richer, and longer-lasting. 7. Parents do have some recourse. They can meet with principals and teachers, organize other parents, and protest. Parents in several communities have prevailed upon school districts to enact homework limits. For their children, at least, there may still be time to indulge in the ancient and powerful medium for learning known as play.

As implied in paragraph 2, what is the criticism directed to elementary teachers?

- A. They are teaching too little.
- B. They are not giving enough homework.
- C. They teach children a familiar story.
- D. They do not assign interesting work to children.

10. 1. When I was in junior high school, my parents gave me a typewriter. My friends Amy Neff and Carol Stein often walked with me to my house after school. We closed my bedroom and spent the afternoon giggling-or rolling on the carpet, howling with lunatic laughter as we tapped out silly limericks and satirical stories on my typewriter. Once we even wrote a play. 2. Our after-school typing was not homework. We rambled wherever our teenage imaginations took us; we explored words widely for the pure fun of it, with no exam or report cards in mind. We practiced literacy risk taking and problem solving, honed our language skills and learning perseverance, all with no fear of failure-because we were playing. Few children today have time for this kind of after-school play. There is too much homework. Parents' concerns about overload have become a familiar story as schools all over the country pile on homework in a mis-aimed response to criticism that they were teaching too little. Some elementary teachers routinely assign time-consuming work in each of three or four academic subjects every night. 3. Amy Neff, one of the friends who helped me enjoy my typewriter in junior high, learned at school meeting in May that in fifth grade her 10 year-old daughter would have an hour and a half to two hours of homework seven days a week, plus special projects. "The idea is that, under avalanche of work, children should learn to organize their time efficiently," she wrote me in an e-mail message. "Nobody has mentioned creativity; ideas and content of what is learned. Just doing LOTS,FAST!" 4. The parents and grandparents of today's children had time "playing around" with stamp collections or model airplanes, writing a fairy-tale, selling lemonade or not realize is that these kinds of interests and hobbies are just as important as academic learning. 5. Many successful adults have a childhood history of freewheel play. Louis Ignarro, a Nobel Prize winning pharmacologist, had six successively complex chemistry sets and played with model rockets. When Letty Cottin Pogrebin, president of the Authors Guild, an association of published writers, was 9, she spent afternoons writing and drawing for a monthly magazine she printed on a primitive press called hectograph. She charged friends and family 3 cents a copy and then mailed each copy with a 3 cent stamp. She recalls now, "I never understood why the magazine did not make a profit." But that is just the point: when kids play, they are free to experiment and learn from experiences, without worrying about how well they are performing. 6. Though homework has a clear benefit in high school, there is no research showing that any amount of it advances the education of elementary school kids. They may be stuffing a great deal of information in to their heads, but after an hour or two, children lose any eagerness or joy they have in learning. That is important because research has shown that when children enjoy it, their learning is deeper, richer, and longer-lasting. 7. Parents do have some recourse. They can meet with principals and teachers, organize other parents, and protest. Parents in several communities have prevailed upon school districts to enact homework limits. For their children, at least, there may still be time to indulge in the ancient and powerful medium for learning known as play.

One major issue the author mentioned about the parents and grandparents of today's children is that they:

- A. Had no fear or failure at school.
- B. Were not given homework to do after school
- C. Had time for out of school interest and hobbies
- D. Did not realize that after school play enhanced learning.

11. 1. When I was in junior high school, my parents gave me a typewriter. My friends Amy Neff and Carol Stein often walked with me to my house after school. We closed my bedroom and spent the afternoon giggling-or rolling on the carpet, howling with lunatic laughter as we tapped out silly limericks and satirical stories on my typewriter. Once we even wrote a play. 2. Our after-school typing was not homework. We rambled wherever our teenage imaginations took us; we explored words widely for the pure fun of it, with no exam or report cards in mind. We practiced literacy risk taking and problem solving, honed our language skills and learning perseverance, all with no fear of failure-because we were playing. Few children today have time for this kind of after-school play. There is too much homework. Parents' concerns about overload have become a familiar story as schools all over the country pile on homework in a mis-aimed response to criticism that they were teaching too little. Some elementary teachers routinely assign time-consuming work in each of three or four academic subjects every night. 3. Amy Neff, one of the friends who helped me enjoy my typewriter in junior high, learned at school meeting in May that in fifth grade her 10 year-old daughter would have an hour and a half to two hours of homework seven days a week, plus special projects. "The idea is that, under avalanche of work, children should learn to organize their time efficiently," she wrote me in an e-mail message. "Nobody has mentioned creativity; ideas and content of what is learned. Just doing LOTS,FAST!" 4. The parents and grandparents of today's children had time "playing around" with stamp collections or model airplanes, writing a fairy-tale, selling lemonade or not realize is that these kinds of interests and hobbies are just as important as academic learning. 5. Many successful adults have a childhood history of freewheel play. Louis Ignarro, a Nobel Prize winning pharmacologist, had six successively complex chemistry sets and played with model rockets. When Letty Cottin Pogrebin, president of the Authors Guild, an association of published writers, was 9, she spent afternoons writing and drawing for a monthly magazine she printed on a primitive press called hectograph. She charged friends and family 3 cents a copy and then mailed each copy with a 3 cent stamp. She recalls now, "I never understood why the magazine did not make a profit." But that is just the point: when kids play, they are free to experiment and learn from experiences, without worrying about how well they are performing. 6. Though homework has a clear benefit in high school, there is no research showing that any amount of it advances the education of elementary school kids. They may be stuffing a great deal of information in to their heads, but after an hour or two, children lose any eagerness or joy they have in learning. That is important because research has shown that when children enjoy it, their learning is deeper, richer, and longer-lasting. 7. Parents do have some recourse. They can meet with principals and teachers, organize other parents, and protest. Parents in several communities have prevailed upon school districts to enact homework limits. For their children, at least, there may still be time to indulge in the ancient and powerful medium for learning known as play.

The author her childhood experience to:

- A. Show that she had good friends to play with.
- B. Describe how she spent her after school hours.
- C. Show how, through play, they were learning.
- D. Tell us that she used a type writer to do her homework.

12. 1. When I was in junior high school, my parents gave me a typewriter. My friends Amy Neff and Carol Stein often walked with me to my house after school. We closed my bedroom and spent the afternoon giggling-or rolling on the carpet, howling with lunatic laughter as we tapped out silly limericks and satirical stories on my typewriter. Once we even wrote a play. 2. Our after-school typing was not homework. We rambled wherever our teenage imaginations took us; we explored words widely for the pure fun of it, with no exam or report cards in mind. We practiced literacy risk taking and problem solving, honed our language skills and learning perseverance, all with no fear of failure-because we were playing. Few children today have time for this kind of after-school play. There is too much homework. Parents' concerns about overload have become a familiar story as schools all over the country pile on homework in a mis-aimed response to criticism that they were teaching too little. Some elementary teachers routinely assign time-consuming work in each of three or four academic subjects every night. 3. Amy Neff, one of the friends who helped me enjoy my typewriter in junior high, learned at school meeting in May that in fifth grade her 10 year-old daughter would have an hour and a half to two hours of homework seven days a week, plus special projects. "The idea is that, under avalanche of work, children should learn to organize their time efficiently," she wrote me in an e-mail message. "Nobody has mentioned creativity; ideas and content of what is learned. Just doing LOTS,FAST!" 4. The parents and grandparents of today's children had time "playing around" with stamp collections or model airplanes, writing a fairy-tale, selling lemonade or not realize is that these kinds of interests and hobbies are just as important as academic learning. 5. Many successful adults have a childhood history of freewheel play. Louis Ignarro, a Nobel Prize winning pharmacologist, had six successively complex chemistry sets and played with model rockets. When Letty Cottin Pogrebin, president of the Authors Guild, an association of published writers, was 9, she spent afternoon writing and drawing for a monthly magazine she printed on a primitive press called hectograph. She charged friends and family 3 cents a copy and then mailed each copy with a 3 cent stamp. She recalls now, "I never understood why the magazine did not make a profit." But that is just the point: when kids play, they are free to experiment and learn from experiences, without worrying about how well they are performing. 6. Though homework has a clear benefit in high school, there is no research showing that any amount of it advances the education of elementary school kids. They may be stuffing a great deal of information in to their heads, but after an hour or two, children lose any eagerness or joy they have in learning. That is important because research has shown that when children enjoy it, their learning is deeper, richer, and longer-lasting. 7. Parents do have some recourse. They can meet with principals and teachers, organize other parents, and protest. Parents in several communities have prevailed upon school districts to enact homework limits. For their children, at least, there may still be time to indulge in the ancient and powerful medium for learning known as play.

The tone of the author can best be described as:

- | | |
|---------------|------------------|
| A. Dismissive | B. Argumentative |
| C. emphatic | D. compassionate |

13. 1. When I was in junior high school, my parents gave me a typewriter. My friends Amy Neff and Carol Stein often walked with me to my house after school. We closed my bedroom and spent the afternoon giggling-or rolling on the carpet, howling with lunatic laughter as we tapped out silly limericks and satirical stories on my typewriter. Once we even wrote a play. 2. Our after-school typing was not homework. We rambled wherever our teenage imaginations took us; we explored words widely for the pure fun of it, with no exam or report cards in mind. We practiced literacy risk taking and problem solving, honed our language skills and learning perseverance, all with no fear of failure-because we were playing. Few children today have time for this kind of after-school play. There is too much homework. Parents' concerns about overload have become a familiar story as schools all over the country pile on homework in a mis-aimed response to criticism that they were teaching too little. Some elementary teachers routinely assign time-consuming work in each of three or four academic subjects every night. 3. Amy Neff, one of the friends who helped me enjoy my typewriter in junior high, learned at school meeting in May that in fifth grade her 10 year-old daughter would have an hour and a half to two hours of homework seven days a week, plus special projects. "The idea is that, under avalanche of work, children should learn to organize their time efficiently," she wrote me in an e-mail message. "Nobody has mentioned creativity; ideas and content of what is learned. Just doing LOTS,FAST!" 4. The parents and grandparents of today's children had time "playing around" with stamp collections or model airplanes, writing a fairy-tale, selling lemonade or not realize is that these kinds of interests and hobbies are just as important as academic learning. 5. Many successful adults have a childhood history of freewheel play. Louis Ignarro, a Nobel Prize winning pharmacologist, had six successively complex chemistry sets and played with model rockets. When Letty Cottin Pogrebin, president of the Authors Guild, an association of published writers, was 9, she spent afternoons writing and drawing for a monthly magazine she printed on a primitive press called hectograph. She charged friends and family 3 cents a copy and then mailed each copy with a 3 cent stamp. She recalls now, "I never understood why the magazine did not make a profit." But that is just the point: when kids play, they are free to experiment and learn from experiences, without worrying about how well they are performing. 6. Though homework has a clear benefit in high school, there is no research showing that any amount of it advances the education of elementary school kids. They may be stuffing a great deal of information in to their heads, but after an hour or two, children lose any eagerness or joy they have in learning. That is important because research has shown that when children enjoy it, their learning is deeper, richer, and longer-lasting. 7. Parents do have some recourse. They can meet with principals and teachers, organize other parents, and protest. Parents in several communities have prevailed upon school districts to enact homework limits. For their children, at least, there may still be time to indulge in the ancient and powerful medium for learning known as play.

The author looks at the issue of homework and after-school play from:

- A. Teachers' and parents' perspectives.
- B. Her own and her friends' perspectives.
- C. School principals' and parents' perspectives.
- D. Her friends', teachers', and parents' perspectives.

14. 1. When I was in junior high school, my parents gave me a typewriter. My friends Amy Neff and Carol Stein often walked with me to my house after school. We closed my bedroom and spent the afternoon giggling-or rolling on the carpet, howling with lunatic laughter as we tapped out silly limericks and satirical stories on my typewriter. Once we even wrote a play. 2. Our after-school typing was not homework. We rambled wherever our teenage imaginations took us; we explored words widely for the pure fun of it, with no exam or report cards in mind. We practiced literacy risk taking and problem solving, honed our language skills and learning perseverance, all with no fear of failure-because we were playing. Few children today have time for this kind of after-school play. There is too much homework. Parents' concerns about overload have become a familiar story as schools all over the country pile on homework in a mis-aimed response to criticism that they were teaching too little. Some elementary teachers routinely assign time-consuming work in each of three or four academic subjects every night. 3. Amy Neff, one of the friends who helped me enjoy my typewriter in junior high, learned at school meeting in May that in fifth grade her 10 year-old daughter would have an hour and a half to two hours of homework seven days a week, plus special projects. "The idea is that, under avalanche of work, children should learn to organize their time efficiently," she wrote me in an e-mail message. "Nobody has mentioned creativity; ideas and content of what is learned. Just doing LOTS,FAST!" 4. The parents and grandparents of today's children had time "playing around" with stamp collections or model airplanes, writing a fairy-tale, selling lemonade or not realize is that these kinds of interests and hobbies are just as important as academic learning. 5. Many successful adults have a childhood history of freewheel play. Louis Ignarro, a Nobel Prize winning pharmacologist, had six successively complex chemistry sets and played with model rockets. When Letty Cottin Pogrebin, president of the Authors Guild, an association of published writers, was 9, she spent afternoons writing and drawing for a monthly magazine she printed on a primitive press called hectograph. She charged friends and family 3 cents a copy and then mailed each copy with a 3 cent stamp. She recalls now, "I never understood why the magazine did not make a profit." But that is just the point: when kids play, they are free to experiment and learn from experiences, without worrying about how well they are performing. 6. Though homework has a clear benefit in high school, there is no research showing that any amount of it advances the education of elementary school kids. They may be stuffing a great deal of information into their heads, but after an hour or two, children lose any eagerness or joy they have in learning. That is important because research has shown that when children enjoy it, their learning is deeper, richer, and longer-lasting. 7. Parents do have some recourse. They can meet with principals and teachers, organize other parents, and protest. Parents in several communities have prevailed upon school districts to enact homework limits. For their children, at least, there may still be time to indulge in the ancient and powerful medium for learning known as play.

Elementary teachers responded to the criticism directed at them by:

- A. Giving special projects
- B. Telling kids familiar stories.
- C. Giving too much homework
- D. Teaching kids to organize their time efficiently

15. Several students are _____ at the prospect of joining university next year. (1)

- | | |
|--------------|------------|
| A. incited | B. relaxed |
| C. surprised | D. excited |

16. The _____ placed a sticker on each piece of cake she checked for quality. (1)

- | | |
|--------------|---------------|
| A. Spectator | B. supervisor |
| C. inspector | D. director |

17. The hotel _____ brought our luggage to our rooms. (1)

- | | |
|--------------|-------------|
| A. Reporter | B. porter |
| C. supporter | D. importer |

-
18. Linda _____ her request for a vacation to her boss. (1)
- | | |
|--------------|--------------|
| A. Emitted | B. permitted |
| C. submitted | D. omitted |
-
19. Lensa, who is always worried about her weight, eats like a/an _____. (1)
- | | |
|---------|-------------|
| A. Bird | B. ant |
| C. pig | D. elephant |
-
20. Many people have a/an _____ about flying and won't travel by plane. (1)
- | | |
|-------------|--------------|
| A. Hysteria | B. nostalgia |
| C. phobia | D. accident |
-
21. Laptop computer are _____ they allow work to be done in many different locations. (1)
- | | |
|-------------|------------|
| A. Potable | B. durable |
| C. portable | D. sizable |
-
22. These people seem to be _____. They need additional protein and vitamins. (1)
- | | |
|-------------|-----------------|
| A. Hungry | B. malnourished |
| C. Starving | D. impoverished |
-
23. I appreciate you for the enormous _____. I felt so moved and encouraged. (1)
- | | |
|---------------|---------------|
| A. completion | B. supplement |
| C. complement | D. compliment |
-
24. There have been sporadic _____ in all comers of the city almost the whole year. (1)
- | | |
|---------------|----------------|
| A. ritots | B. stalks |
| C. revellions | D. revolutions |
-
25. Olantu was _____ to go to her new school. She did not know any of the students in there. (1)
- | | |
|--------------|--------------|
| A. resilient | B. reluctant |
| C. restless | D. repellent |
-
26. He _____ in bed the whole day. He had a terrible headache. (1)
- | | |
|---------|---------|
| A. lie | B. lay |
| C. lied | D. laid |
-
27. As a child, I sometimes lied to my mother. This led her to _____ me even today. (1)
- | | |
|-------------|--------------|
| A. mistreat | B. mistake |
| C. mistrust | D. mishandle |
-
28. This year's beauty is very stiff. It is difficult to predict the winner. (1)
- | | |
|------------|----------------|
| A. rivalry | B. contention |
| C. contest | D. competition |
-
29. Ato Lema spent almost three years in prison for a crime he did not _____. (1)
- | | |
|------------|------------|
| A. commit | B. commute |
| C. conduct | D. condemn |

30. Have you ever a situation or formed a wrong first impression? (1)

- A. misjudged B. disrespected
C. mistreated D. disrupted

31. This one here is faulty. If you need it badly, we can give you at a discount. (1)

- A. for less money B. without counting
C. as it is D. for free

32. It was just a shot in the dark. No wonder he got it all wrong. (1)

- A. a blind money B. a bad proposal
C. a silly mistake D. a deliberate attack

33. She had a hard time concealing her emotions. (1)

- A. hiding B. conceiving
C. sharing D. correcting

34. When the thief saw the police officers. It is face went as white as a sheet. (1)

- A. terrified
B. excited
C. motivated
D. annoyed

35. Stop shouting! I am trying to get a grasp of what is happening. (1)

- A. observe B. absorb
C. report D. understand

36. He is leaving. I think he has a bigger fish to fry. (1)

- A. Something bigger to eat.
- B. Additional cooking to do.
- C. Some more money to collect.
- D. Something more important to do.

37. That was a concert where Teddy Afro stole the show but to many it wasn't surprising. (1)

- A. Sang others' songs. B. Cheated the audience.
C. Got attention and praise. D. Took advantage undeservedly.

38. He is sure of himself that he can finish it in time. (1)

- A. confidant B. confident
C. confidante D. confidential

39. I couldn't still make up my mind about what to study at university. (1)

- A. limit B. judge
C. plan D. decide

40. I will see you when I _____ back. (1)

- A. get B. will got
C. got D. would get

41. Jobs that call for strength and muscle no longer exist in the numbers that they once_____. (1)

- A. do B. were
C. did D. exist

42. Rains cause soil erosion, _____ away millions of tones of precious top soil every year. (1)

- A. carrying B. have carried
C. carried D. are carrying

43. Talent is like a plant that needs_____. Watered, and pruned. (1)

- A. feeding B. to feed
C. food D. to be fed

44. The rich aren't_____ the poor. (1)

- A. happier than B. as happier than
C. as happier as D. so happier than

45. Last night, I _____ sleep well because I had been drinking too much coffee. (1)

- A. wouldn't B. couldn't
C. can't D. shouldn't

46. If I saw anyone cheating on this exam, I certainly _____report the case to the invigilator. (1)

- A. will B. would
C. could D. shall

47. When I heard the news, I _____. (1)

- A. delighted
B. was delighted
C. was delighting
D. have been delighted

48. Either of them_____to blame. They know the only key we have is with them. (1)

- A. is B. has
C. are D. have

49. Should the machine fail, everybody_____to evacuate and report to the operator. (1)

- A. is B. will
C. has D. have

50. He fell of his horse a month ago and now he is on a _____ stick. (1)

- A. catching B. supporting
C. walking D. leaning

51. It is sad but _____ seems to care about the prisoners. Please make sure they have lunch. (1)

- A. nobody B. everybody
C. anybody D. somebody

52. Sorry. You can't speak to Mahlet. She _____ a bath. (1)

- A. have B. is having
C. does D. has

53. I feel that_____ loves me from the group, so I have to join another one. (1)

- A. everyone B. someone
C. anyone D. no one

-
54. Her husband abuses her a lot and now she has decided to run any. She says there cannot be any_____life. (1)
- A. cheaper
B. happier
C. poorer
D. tougher
-
55. If you see any unattended bag, you_____immediately report to us. (1)
- A. may
B. must
C. will
D. ought to
-
56. They started early _____ get there before noon. (1)
- A. so as to
B. because to
C. so that
D. so that to
-
57. Application are accepted only if you submit them no _____than the end of this month. That is the deadline. (1)
- A. later
B. faster
C. after
D. sooner
-
58. Caffeine _____ to cause withdrawal symptoms such as headache and irritability. (1)
- A. is known
B. has known
C. knows
D. know
-
59. I was with her for dinner. She _____ the car which they claim disappeared around 7 pm. (1)
- A. won't have stolen
B. would have stolen
C. couldn't steal
D. can probably steal
-
60. In my life, I _____ had money counted in four digits. Poor me! (1)
- A. have never
B. haven't never
C. am never
D. am not have
-
61. Our departure is only a week away, but we haven't got our tickets_____. Isn't that something to worry about? (1)
- A. yet
B. still
C. now
D. still now
-
62. Tola: Let's go out for a drink. Bereket: _____. (1)
- A. who else is coming?
B. Why do you like drinks?
C. Drinks are means of socializing.
D. I would rather like going to the theatre.
-
63. Secretary: May I help you? Visitor: _____. (1)
- A. why do you ask?
B. What kind of help?
C. What do you mean?
D. Can I see the boss, please?

-
- 83. Which one of the following sentences has correct punctuations? (1)
- A. Mamo said, "Every dog has its day;" however, I didn't understand what it meant.
 - B. Mamo said, " every dog has its day"; however, I didn't understand what it meant.
 - C. Mamo said, "Every dog has its day"; however, I didn't understand what it meant.
 - D. Mamo said, "every dog has its day;" however, I didn't understand what it meant.
-
- 84. Not suitable for children under 18! This is most likely a warning: (1)
- A. in a movie
 - B. on a box of whisky
 - C. in an X-ray room
 - D. on a pack of cigarettes.
-
- 85. Which one of the following words is correctly spelt? (1)
- A. restaurant
 - B. extention
 - C. cafteria
 - D. vollyball
-
- 86. Which one of the following words is correctly spelt? (1)
- A. scent
 - B. conscent
 - C. omniscient
 - D. reminiscent
-
- 87. The most appropriate closing to a memo you send to a colleague working in the same office with you would be: (1)
- A. Bye,
 - B. Faithfully,
 - C. Good bye,
 - D. Truly yours,
-
- 88. We regret having to report delays in dispatching our order of This is a typical example of a line taken from a letter of (1)
- A. dispatch
 - B. delivery
 - C. collection
 - D. complaint

— END OF EXAMINATION —